THE WASHINGTON CRITIC,

Washington, D. C. RICHARD H. SYLVESTER, - - Editor

WASHINGTON, MAY 29, 1886.

The Washington Critic has received in the past several weeks and is daily receiving more than treble the number of new bonafide subscribers Washington, and in excess of all the other daily papers here added to-gether. Our subscription books are open to the inspection of all persons interested.

The President's marriage is the news topic of the day throughout the coun try; and the prominence gives to this prospective social event has afforded Mr. Cleveland an opportunity to impress upon the people his views of a really important subject-how far the private life of a public official is a legitimate subject of public discussion.

The President has taken the position that in becoming the Chief Magistrate of the Republic, he did not cease to be one of its citizens and that he retained a personal existence which was not merged into his official capacity Everybody supports him in the princi ple which has dictated his course. The less he allows the authority and stately surroundings of his official position to affect his private life the better the people like it.

The representative, typical, ideal citizen of the Republic is what the people would prefer in their President. He can live and woo and wed just as other men, but in proportion as he is of greater prominence so will his private acts be of greater general interest. A whole nation will be interested in private affairs which only a little village or a circle of friends would discuss it he were in an humbler sphere.

The President, while taking so much trouble to emphasize his belief in this principle, has not, perhaps, applied it altogether wisely. A private citizen would scarcely have taken so much pains to conceal the fact of his engagement, or endeavored so vainly to shroud the arrangements in mystery, The President, therefore, might have carried his views of his personal, private, inalienable rights much further, and the American people would have thought all the better of him for being more of a lover and less of Chief Magistrate in his court-Private secretaries and and revenue trains cutters and wedding arrangements by proxy, would seem to have been an unnecessary and superfluous feature of so pleasant an affair. More of the sentimental and less of the official would have been more democratic and more

All this in the friendliest spirit of criticism. The mystery is now unvelled. The fact has alseady coursed upon the wings of the lightning to the uttermost parts of the world. The bride-cleet has arrived. The day is set The preacher has been called. And on Wednesday next, the momentous question of the First Ladyship of the Land will be definitely settled. The great heart of the commonwealth throbs with the aspiration that the union be felicitous.

MR. GLADSTONE'S PLANS.

Judging from the temper and the action of the House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone's new programme in regard to the question of Home Rule will prevail. His programme is, after the second reading of the bill, to allow that measure to lapse for the present session, the Queen being advised to cause an early autumn reassembling of Parliament, at which the bill will be reintroduced with some modifications. The most important of these modifications will be the retention of the Irish members in the Westminster Parliament, whose proposed absence under the Gladstone bill was the cause of much of the discontent which drew from the Government an Important portion of its Liberal support. This and other concessions will, it is believed, recall a sufficient number of the disaffected Liberals to enable Mr. Gladstone to carry out successfully the gallant fight that he has been making under disadvantages which would have overwhelmed ere this a man of less ability. An instance of the temper of the House as regards Mr. Gladstone's present plans was furnished last night.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, a very hotblooded opponent of the Government, knot breeze. Mr. Lamar had his hat on the moved the adjournment of the debate back of his head and it was shifted end for on the bill. After a very warm interchange of remarks on the subject Sir Michael saw how things were and asked to withdraw his motion. But he was forced to a division, and the result was the rejection of that motion of 405 to 1. All of which shows that Mr. Gladstone can be safely trusted with It would be indecorous, perhaps, to sug-the management of the question of gest that they were full some themselves. Home Rule

BOGUS BUTTER.

The United States ought to produce enough of the best butter in the world to supply its home consumption at a moderate price. So far from this being the case butter has become a luxury, something it ought not to be any more than bread; and so far from enough decent butter being made to supply all consumers, it is safe to assume that half the people at least are obliged to use an inferior article, which is dear at any price. Strange as it may seem, in a country which excels all others on the face of the globe in grazing area and grassproduct and in all resources for raising fine cows and producing rich milk, nothing is so scarce in the markets as really choice butter, and what there is of it is held at such exalted figures that poor people have no alternative but to buy the cheap stuff, which is spoiled in the making, or to procure tome more palatable and wholesome substitute. The dairy interest, in short, has become one of the most overbearing and mercenary, as it seems to be one of the most potential and unscrupulous menopolles of the day.

It is so powerful at least that it would take the Congress of the United States by the car and force intelligent statesmen to do its bidding without a protest, which is a good deal more than Jay Gould was ever able to do.

Comrades, in what soldier grave Siers the bravest of the brave; Was it he who sank to rest. With the colors round his breast? Friendahly makes his tomb a shrine, Garlands vell it—Ack not mine,

Yet no heart more high and warm Ever dared the battle storm, Never foot had firmer tread On the field when hope lay dead, Than are hid within this tomb Where the untended grasses bloom, And no stone, with felgraed distress, Mocks the sacred loneliness,

Youth and beauty, dauntless will, Dreams that life could ne'er fulfill, Here its turied; here in peace Wrongs and wees have found release. Turning from my comrade's eyes, Enceling where a woman lies, I strew lities on the grave of the braves of the brave.

EDITOR CRITIC: I beg leave to add still EDITOR CRITIC: I beg leave to add still another name to your list of "living war governors," viz., that of Anstin Blair of Michigan. Ex-Governor Blair served eix years in the House of Representatives after the war, and is at present one of the regents of the Michigan University and also Prosecuting Attorney of Jackson County, which last office he accepted mainly for the purpose of redesiming it from the reproach of a lax and feeble administration of the duties of that office, more particularly with respect to the prosecution of the murderers of the Cranch family. If I mistake not, there are two other "war governors" still living.

Wasunaron, D. C., May 28, 1886.

Memorial Day will be observed in this District on the flist instant, the 30th falling on Sunday, It has been our custom in the past to call on the pupils of the public schools for flowers with which to decorate the graves of the Union soldiers who lie burfed at Arlington and other cemeteries in this jurisdiction. This year the schools close on the 98th and remain closed until June 1. It is, therefore, impracticable to gather flowers in the manuer we have been doing, because flowers brought to the schools on Friday would fade before Monday.

We, therefore, appeal to the patriotic citizachs to help us to overcome this difficulty by a generous contribution of flowers, which may be left at the following places on Sunday, or before 830 a. m. Monday, 31st inst.:
